LOCKS VS. SEA LEVEL.

A question that is sure to agitate congress considerably soon after the holiday recess is as to whether the Panama ditch shall be a lock system or a sea level canal. The president is insisting on a lock canal, despite the fact that a majority of the international board of engineers on that Board and of the number five voted for a lock system.

Those who so voted were Sterns, constructor of Boston's great water systems; Ripley who had charge of the digging of the "Soo" canal; Noble designer of mammoth Pennsylvania railway improvements; Randolph, head of the engineering board of the Chicago drainage canal; Abbot, a highly esteemed naval engineer. These gentlemen are all of high standing in their professions.

Further, the chief engineer of the canal, John F. Stevens, is outspoken in favor of locks; so is the majority of the Panama canal commission. It is pointed out that the locks will greatly decrease the cost of construction, make it possible to estimate the cost of the undertaking and to complete it in a much briefer period of time. The statement is made that the cost of the sea level canal cannot be even approximately estimated, nor the time that will be needed for the construction. All that is known is that it will be vastly more expensive than the lock system, though the latter would be more expensive of operation.

The reasons appear to be sound ones. Yet the question arises: Shall we disregard the opinions of the eminent foreigners whose services we have called into requisition. Mr. Roosevelt says yes. It remains to be seen what Congress will do.

Western congressmen are said to be up in arms against admitting Philippine sugar free of duty. How they expect to accomplish anything after having allowed themselves to be bound hand and foot by the house rules is not easy to understand.

Governor LaFollette, having separated himself from the gubernatorial chair, the country now expects a shaking up of the dry bones in the senate. The junior Wisconsin senator will probably prove a good antidote for an overdose of Spooner.

The Sentinel says that good progress is being made with the Ruby Hill railroad. A mile and a half of the road is in running order. The Europeans are jubilant over the prospects and predict lively times for the old camp in the near future.

Our stock of holiday goods are the finest to be had. Prices reasonable. Davey & Maish.
